LET ALL REJOICE.

The Republicans will Meet for a "Hurrah" Monday Night.

Monday evening the Republicans will have a jollification rally, with a street parade, music by the full band, hurrahs and guns, and a general good time, to wind up with a meeting in Opera house, at which there will be some rousing speeches and other appropriate doings. Let all join in the good time.

BRIEFLETS.

—Ancient Order of United Workmen meet this evening.

—The weather, like the Republican party, is hard to beat.

—Remember the Republican "hurrah" meeting Monday night next.

—Hon. F. W. Keyes and Hon. I. C. Sloan, will speak at the Opera house next Monday evening.

—Prof. Severance's dancing school claims attention for to-morrow night, and is too good a thing to be forgotten or overlooked.

—The Republicans can't keep bottled all their enthusiasm until next Monday night, but they will have enough left to make the jollification on that evening a rouser.

—Thomas Rooney, of Harmony, today sold the first load of straw yet sold on the new East side market. He was not on the ground five minutes before he found a purchaser.

—The jollification meeting of the Republicans Monday night will be a rouser and all who "rejoice" with them who do "rejoice" should be out in full force, and help celebrate the glorious victories.

—The masked burglars haven't been captured yet; and those who are so wise as to think no burglary took place, don't seem to find any proof to brace up their theory, so mystery still envelops the case.

—The call for a mass meeting of the Democrats of the First Assembly district, to be held at the Court House this afternoon, resulted only in bringing out the representative of the Gazette, who sat in cheerful solitude reading over the glorious news from Indiana and waiting for the Democracy to pour in. But it didn't pour.

—One of our worthy citizens, who has been away from home brought on his return an elegant floral offering which he expected to present at a wedding, but imagine his surprise when he learned that the wedding had taken place a week or ten days ago, and now his friends grin at him for not keeping better posted.

—A four year old daughter of James McArthur, of Johnstown, fell into a cistern on Mr. Godfrey's place last Wednesday, and was drowned. It appears that Mrs. McArthur with the little child were over to Godfrey's, and the child in playing with another a little older, fell into the cistern, and before her little companion could get help it was too late to save her.

—Fredericks, the jolly livery stable man, has been investing in a new land, which is really elegant, and is as fine a carriage as ever rolled through the streets of Janesville. Fredericks keeps up with the demands of his customers, and is continually bettering his stock, so that he has a fine showing of horses and carriages to suit all the varied calls to which a first class livery is subjected. This last purchase of his is indeed one which shows enterprise, and will be appreciated by his customers.

—If he was an enthusiastic Democrat with a kindly heart in him, and when he saw that the little fellow had one arm done up in a sling, he began talking to him about the injury, and wound up by handling him a dime, and jocosely asking:—

"Well my little man, are you a Democrat?" "Oh yes sir, me and my father, and my brothers, all of 'em are Democrats."

"How many brothers have you, my lad?" "Three sir."

"And they are all Democrats, eh?" "Oh, yes, sir."

"That's good my boy, they're sound; but where are your brothers now?" "Well one of 'em is in Waupun, and the other two is in the reform school." There were no more queries about that section of the Democratic party.

—At the sixth competitive drill of the guards last night for the Glass medal, there were twenty-four men in line. Captain Smith gave the commands, and Lieutenants Glass, Newman, and Sergeant Hand, and Fred McLean acted as judges.

Among those who dropped out early was George Grove, who has already won the medal twice, and C. E. Wintermute, who has won the medal once, was the second one to drop out. At the last there were but four standing, J. B. Doe, Jr., P. Heffron, C. C. McLean, and George Searell.

The last named dropped first, then Doe and Heffron went down on the same mistake, leaving McLean the winner of the medal. The winners in the six competitive drills held are, McLean, Wintermute, Grove, Doe, Grove, McLean. As the final holder of the medal must win in three drills, either McLean or Grove can get permanent possession of it by winning once more, as each has won in two contests already.

EQUALIZING TAXES.

The committee consists of L. B. Carl, S. T. Merrill, George Howard, and Silas Ward, William Gunn, S. H. Slaymaker and John Dawe, and all are present except Mr. Gunn, who is in the East.

BENNETT AT MADISON.

According to the Madison Journal Hon. John R. Bennett gave the members of the University and Young Men's Garden and Arthur Club, at their meeting, yesterday, a lively speech. It says:

The business part of the meeting being over, and the Hon. John R. Bennett being seen in the room, he was called upon to address the meeting, and though he had happened in at the Headquarters with no expectation of being called upon, he proceeded to make one of the neatest, most effective and satisfactory impromptu speeches which has been delivered in the Capital City during the campaign. He called up the damning record of the Democratic party, and charged upon its leaders the guilt of prostituting the elective franchise to secure the accomplishment of the worst partisan measures. The telling points with which the speech abounded were greeted with the liveliest applause, and the meeting adjourned in the very best of humor.

SAT. & LIGHTEN, OF CHICAGO, ILL., - Day of sell and ship, and prizes for future delivery on commission. Margins required, five cents per bushel on wheat; three cents on corn and oats. ## WORDS FROM THE WAR.

The Chilian Fleet Firing Upon the Peruvian Shore. Exciting Incidents Seen by a Pair of Janesville Eyes.

The following letter by Lieutenant Frank Bostwick to his father, J. M. Bostwick, will prove of interest not only to those who have a personal interest in the writer of the letter, but to those who have been watching the progress of the war of which he speaks:

U. S. STEAMER LACAWANNA, OFF SHORE, PERU, Sept. 7, 1893.

The shore in the neighborhood of Callao, is well lined with batteries, one containing twenty-inch guns, firing thousand-pound projectiles. Directly in front of the city is a mole or breakwater, perhaps half a mile long, and this is lined with heavy mortars, and a line of batteries; while running parallel with it throughout its entire length, and distant some two hundred yards, a line of spurs and sews have been chained together as a protection against torpedo boats. Behind the mole is all the Peruvian shipping, including several steamers and hulks, two or three tug boats, torpedo boats, the monitor "Atahualpa," and the Peruvian man-of-war "Union." Neutral ships are allowed to communicate with the shore, and our launch goes in two or three times a day. The neutral ground is to the left of the city looking from seaward, and we are anchored some four miles out.

The Chilian fleet is about five miles from the mole. There were only three of them on our first arrival, but since then they have increased to seven or eight. A boat a week ago the "Argamos" opened fire on the shipping, evidently attempting to destroy the "Union." She is mounted with one breech-loading Armstrong gun, eighteen feet long, firing a projectile weighing one hundred and eighty pounds, and using a charge of ninety pounds of powder. She is about four and one quarter miles, entirely out of range of the shore batteries. The accuracy with which she fired was wonderful, all her shots striking on or near the mole, a few shots going into the city. Her object in standing off so far, was to fire at a great elevation, and drop a shot onto the "Union."

The first afternoon she opened fire, some of our officers were walking from the cars to the landing, when a shell came into the street and exploded about a hundred yards ahead of them. One of our officers was struck by a stone, but was not hurt, while an Englishman, not so lucky, was severely injured in the leg.

The next day there being no indications of firing, we thought it safe to go ashore. When about three miles from the ship, the "Argamos" steamed out to her position, and just as we were crossing the line of fire, a puff of smoke from the Chilian told us a shell was coming. We waited in breathless suspense, and in about twenty seconds the shell came shrieking over our heads, and buried itself in the mud without exploding, about two hundred yards ahead of us. As we reached the landing another shell whistled over us.

Before we reached the train several shots were fired and two shells came into the city crashing through the houses, so near that the jar of the ground could be felt when they struck. None exploded, and we were soon on our way to Lima. In the afternoon on returning, the firing had ceased, but began almost before we got on board.

The shore batteries returned the fire until they found it useless. Almost every day since then the "Argamos" has occupied several hours firing at the shipping, but hardly an answer from the shore. But at one or two times we were surprised to see three Peruvian tugs steaming out a little after noon. They were each armed with a small gun mounted on the bow, and one was rigged with torpedoes. They came out to a considerable distance, keeping up a continuous fire. The "Argamos" answered them completely, but the "Covadonga," a vessel armed with a battery of smaller guns, engaged them, and drove them back behind the mole in a few hours. The last shot fired by the "Argamos" was a damaging one. It was a plunging shot, striking the deck of an iron steamship, and the vessel went down. The shot struck the deck, and then out of one of the ports, taking off the head of a man who happened to be looking out. It then struck the "Lima," one of the tugs which had taken part in the afternoon engagement, wounding two men, and sinking the vessel before she could get into shallow water. There has been no firing to-day or yesterday, but it may begin again any hour. We are looking forward to a general bombardment before long, but of course nothing is known of the anticipated movements of the Chileans.

FRANK BOSTWICK.

—The friends here of Mrs. A. C. Fish, of Racine, will be pained to learn that she was thrown from her buggy, Wednesday evening, and received some severe injuries. The cause of the accident was a runaway team owned by Case & Co., which collided with her buggy, and killed her horse.

AN ENJOYABLE GATHERING.

Last evening Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Hodson entertained a large number of their friends at their residence, and extended most hospitably as made all enjoy the occasion most heartily. Mrs. John Hodson, of Chicago, joined in receiving the guests, and the company when assembled numbered about one hundred. The floral decorations were very elaborate indeed, there being a great many cut flowers, arranged most charmingly in all the rooms, and many plants in bloom and other adornments. The conservatory which is a bewildering of floral beauty, was brightly lighted, and the rooms throughout when filled with the gay assemblage of ladies and gentlemen presented a brilliant appearance. Tuckwood's band furnished music for those delighting in the dance, there was card-playing, and chatting, and everything needful for social pleasure. The refreshments were unusually tempting, and in every detail there was no lack of attentiveness and bountifulness, and the occasion was a grand success in all respects.
